Course Objectives	The course aims to build up students' critical-thinking skill through reading the most recent empirical development economics literature and participating in class discussion.
Course Description	This course discusses why some countries are rich but others are poor from the perspective of institutional economics. It follows Douglass North and asks why, under certain institutions, the private return of economic activities is lower than the social return. We address this question by studying recent development economics literature with a focus on property right, contract institutions, corruption, and taxation. In addition, it introduces a variety of methodological approaches to address a number of empirical questions, such as what is the value of political connection in Indonesia, does third-party reporting reduce pollution in India, and why some countries have more complicated government hierarchy whereas others do not.
Course Requirements:
There are no formal course prerequisites. However, students can get more from the class if they are proficient in calculus, microeconomics, and econometrics.

The design of class discussion or exercise, practice, experience and so on:

I will raise an open question related to economic development and institutional designs and ask students to respond. It can be much easier to answer the question based on gut feeling or intuition; it is more difficult to think critically following economic reasoning. This is what the students will practice during my class discussions.

Grading & Evaluation:

Each student is evaluated based on three parts: class discussion, a group presentation, and a final exam.

Evaluation	% of Final Grade
1. Class Discussion	10%
2. Group Presentation	30%
4. Final Exam	60%

Class Discussion (10%):

In this course, any opinion or idea will be appreciated. Students are expected to actively participate in class discussion and share your perspective.

Group Presentation (30%): 3-4 people time TBA

Each group searches for an institution, governmental policy, or government project that is related to our course and presents it in class. It could be from any country in any period of time. You should discuss why it imposes or resolves frictions on economic transactions. Each group has 20 minutes to talk.

Final Exam (60%):

A closed-book final exam that contains 20 multiple-choice questions that are based on the reading.
